As soon as Nell put the amulet in her hand it began to glow a bright green. At first Nell was surprised but then she says to the class "I'm sorry Miss. Hudson, but this is so fake." But even before she could finish her sentence the amulet turned dark red for a few seconds then stops "See, nothing happened" Nell says with a rude tone of voice. "Well, how about we go outside!" Miss. Hudson exclaims "Yes!" the whole class agrees.

As the class walked through the hallway, Tara Nell's best friend was able to whisper to her "Are you sure the amulet is fake?" "Of course I'm sure it's just a necklace," Nell whispers back.

When the class walked out the door Nell felt the hot sun beating down on her turn cold. "Is it really cold or what!"

Nell exclaims "Nell, it's 80 degrees. It's not cold." Tara says worried "Whatever, let's join that game of tag!" Nell says sprinting over "Wait, Nell!" Tara says scared "You gave the amulet back to Miss. Hudson, right?" Tara says staring down at Nell's hand "Yeah, why?" Tara points to Nell's left hand there's the amulet hanging there. "Whatever, I'll give it back later." Nell says beginning to run again, Tara running behind her a little worried.

As Nell runs away from Danny laughing, she hits something hard and trips feeling a lot of pain in her knees. When she stands up to see what she tripped over she sees there is nothing there. Her shoes were tied, nothing. When Nell reaches down to touch her knees her hand shot right back up as soon as she touched them. Then the peep. Then she walks up to Miss Hudson and says as she drops the amulet into her hand "I want nothing to do with it anymore!"

Everyone gets stuff that doesn't work, I have but once it really screwed up my day. When I got a new alarm clock I thought it was working fine. But all I can say is that morning was just chaos.

In 3rd grade my parents got me a new radio alarm clock. I wasn't the coolest gift but it was just something they got me. That night my parents showed me how it worked. So that night I slide the switch and went to bed. The next morning I wake hearing my Mom screaming my name and when I look at the clock its almost eight! I rush down stairs eat the quickest breakfast brush my teeth get dressed and run out the door.

The worst part is when I get to school I was in so much trouble and when I got there the office asked what happened I told them my alarm clock didn't work and they didn't believe me I was so mad. They probably thought I slept in late! I would've been on time if my alarm clock worked.

So when I got home I trudged up the stairs and walked into my room and knelt down next to my alarm clock. First I just started pressing random buttons, but then I looked at the volume turned and music started blasting. I found the culprit, and if I was in the position of the narrator of "The Drinking Fountain" I would've tried to discover what was wrong with the drinking fountain first.

That day I learned always make sure your paying attention with stuff
